Milwaukee, June 19.—Danger of a coal famine in the northwest is acute. Hardships and suffering will be forced on close unless strenuous governmental action is at once taken to relieve conditions. Attorney General Palmer was told in a telegram from the Milwaukee Association of Com-

The telegram was sent by Philip A. Grau, business agent of the association and immediately afterward a conference was arranged between association officials and United States Senator J. L. Lenroot to discuss the advisability of sending a Milwaukee delegate to Washington to ask for relief. It is asked that coal exports to foreign nations be stopped.

THE DIARY OF AN ENGAGED GIRL

A GRILLING FROM MOTHER. It was nature that saved the evening, or rather us. Nature in the shape of one of the worst thunderstorms that I have ever lived through.

As we were in each other's arms a tremendous clap of thunder almost tore us apart with the shock.

In a moment Cecil was on his feet and tossing me from the depth of his arms into the air. The lightning was so fearful, and just as I got a fair start the rain came in torrents.

We managed to make a small hotel before the worst came, however, and here we sat and watched the lightning play over the hills and water, and Cecil leaned on the table and went off into a trance.

About to wake the storm subsided, and we crawled out into the night once more. At the very best we could not get home until shockingly late and I remember the thought of the explosion that awaited me at the other end.

We tore along at a grand pace, and once Cecil started the car and said: "Oh, Lindsey, don't make me take you home at all; run off and marry me now, darling. I want you—how want you?"

I covered my face with my hands, for those were the words I had heard to hear my Jack say, and live up to.

"We mustn't Cecil. It isn't fair. You know how things are, dear." I picked it up—it was from him—and on it was written in a shaky hand: "I believe in you, Lindsey. I was glad that I was not to be married for some time to come. It would give me time to weigh things carefully before taking the step. I was beginning to realize that deep reflection was most necessary. Time alone could prove to me what I most needed and whether I really loved some or not. Time and separation."

So Cecil begged me not to feel sad.

at what he said, but to always remember that he never would or could do anything to hurt me. We drove home the rest of the way in silence. The nearer we got to the house the more my courage failed me. It was 1:30 and mother would be in a terrible state.

Finally we arrived, and Cecil let me in, then drove off with the car. Sure enough, mother was up and waiting. As I got to the head of the first landing she called to me.

And what mother didn't let me hear about myself and wicked nature in the next few minutes. She was furiously angry with Cecil for suggesting this trip to me, and threatened to write to his people and explain to them for a bad, etc., etc. Cecil let the storm travel its course, said but little, until mother went a bit too far—then I held my head very high and told her that I would rid her house of my presence forever, the first thing in the morning.

After all, it was too much of a good thing to be so grilled. Cecil and I had done no harm, and here was I being treated like a first-class criminal—for no reason. Truly, the only thing was to run away.

I went to my room, and a long time afterwards I heard Cecil coming upstairs very softly. For an instant I heard him halt at my door, and the pen in my hand trembled—then I heard something crackling and he passed on.

I walked over and saw a piece of paper pushed under the door. I picked it up—it was from him—and on it was written in a shaky hand: "I believe in you, Lindsey. I was glad that I was not to be married for some time to come. It would give me time to weigh things carefully before taking the step. I was beginning to realize that deep reflection was most necessary. Time alone could prove to me what I most needed and whether I really loved some or not. Time and separation."

"Your heart has trembled to my tears," he wrote. "Your lips to mine have held and clung. Again and yet again, my dear, again and yet again."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman with three children, two girls, aged 10 and 12, and a boy 14. My husband wants me to make the girl daughter leave home. She is a good little girl who never gives me any worry. He declares she must leave because she is not doing well in her money she works for. She dresses herself nicely and also her sister. She earns $10 a week. She never goes out except when she asks me and always comes home and tells me just where and with whom she has been. She also is one of the places she is going to and only goes on Saturday and Sunday.

Her father is of a mean disposition and is always making trouble for me. He is so miserable for the children and me that I almost hate him. It seems as if I cannot live with him another day. He provides work for me, however, because he keeps a big garden, almost an acre, and I have to go every day and pick all of my housework and washing. But he will not give me a dollar. Then I have to work for others.

I have left him several times, but always gone back because he wouldn't leave me alone. He would coax and plead with me and say he would do better, but he only does worse. I see I must live with him or live in trouble the rest of my life. My lawyer's advice is to leave him and take the children by law and make him support the two small ones, but we are buying a home and I hate to part with it and my furniture. I can easily provide for my life, but I hate to leave my children with him, but I cannot take care of them without my home and furniture.

A CONSTANT READER.

I hardly believe that divorce would make you any happier. As you say, you have to live with your home, and the furniture and you would have difficulty in living comfortably away from home. If you are able to bear with him a few years longer, you will be in a better position to leave, because your children can take care of themselves.

You do too much work. Tell your husband that you are not going to take care of the garden or the cows any longer because you need your time for housework and you do not feel able to do both. If he cannot make you work without doing your housework and that would be illegal. He would be arrested, fined and dishonored in such a way that he would not dare hurt you. You must be careful and watch him. He must be as his wife you earn your share in his property.

Perhaps it would be better to ask your daughter to pay a little board, a dollar a week if her father would be satisfied. The money should go to you, however, because he keeps the house for you and you do the work. Refuse to take the money if the father is going to benefit by it. If the money goes to you it would be a good thing to start a bank account for your daughter. Later if she marries, which she probably will, she will be grateful to you for saving so that she will have money to spend at that time.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two girls of 16 years. One is 5 feet 4 inches tall and the other 5 feet 10 inches. How much should we weigh? How long should we wear our dresses and how should we wear our hair? What do the following names mean: Anna, Helen, Ruth, Elsie, Frank and John?

COUNTRY LASSIES. The first should weigh 120 pounds and the other 130. A narrow skirt should reach to the shoe tops and a pleated one could be two inches shorter. One cannot give directions for dressing the hair without a knowledge of your features and characteristics.

Anna, Grace, Helen, Ruth, Ruth, friend, Elsie, god of the oath, Frank free, John, gracious gift of God.

ABOUT JAPANESE WOMEN. Of all the changes that are coming to women there is nowhere that they are developing along different lines to such an extent as in Japan. An English woman in Tokyo writing to The London Daily Telegraph says:

No women as yet, however, appear to have shown any ambition to grasp the intricacies of Japanese law, or to adopt the profession of journalism, with only very slight exceptions. The woman editor of the special page in the Yomiuri, in factory administration, however, have rapidly acquiring responsible positions, and it is greatly to be hoped that such women will bring more human insight and sympathy in the conditions that now obtain in factories and to the further exploitation of women labor, in order to relieve the burning economic question of adequate wages, is not adopted.

But as to her interest in politics and social reform generally, the average Japanese woman is distinctly disappointed. The nucleus of a band of "suffragists" certainly exists, but it is so small and the attitude shown by the remainder is so great that something more than the wheels of progress will, I fear, be required to precipitate any action.

Dainty Hats for the Very Young Miss

Dainty little hats for summer wear in white or a pale blue or pink shade. It is just the right finishing touch for dainty little summer frocks. The one at the left is a smart leg-horn with a tan crown of old blue silk which is corded. A silk case in a rich pink is the only trimming. Demure, indeed, is the little polk on the back at the right. It is much on the style of a sunbonnet. The leg-horn which shades the delicate skin of the tiny tot is bound in black silk and the black silk crown is embroidered in silk in a flower design.

They come in every width from the tiniest little ruffle on the tiny gloves to the wide and full which makes a whole skirt with two widths. Here is about the ruffliest thing we have seen in the line of blouses. It is an improved model which will never be popular in the very warm climes, but is very smart just the same. It will be wanted by those women who go for extreme and it really is attractive. It is fashioned of the finest handkerchief linen and every stitch is made by hand. The black bows at the wrist and throat, the little apron petticoat, and the crocheted buttons all help to make it distinctive and unusual. It is a particularly good model for wear with the tailored evening coats which Paris is sponsoring and which we shall probably see at our summer races.

DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through

Price is not the most important consideration in the selection of an automobile.

Value is!

The price of the Dort is not high, but it is sufficient to include important features that cheaper cars do not have:

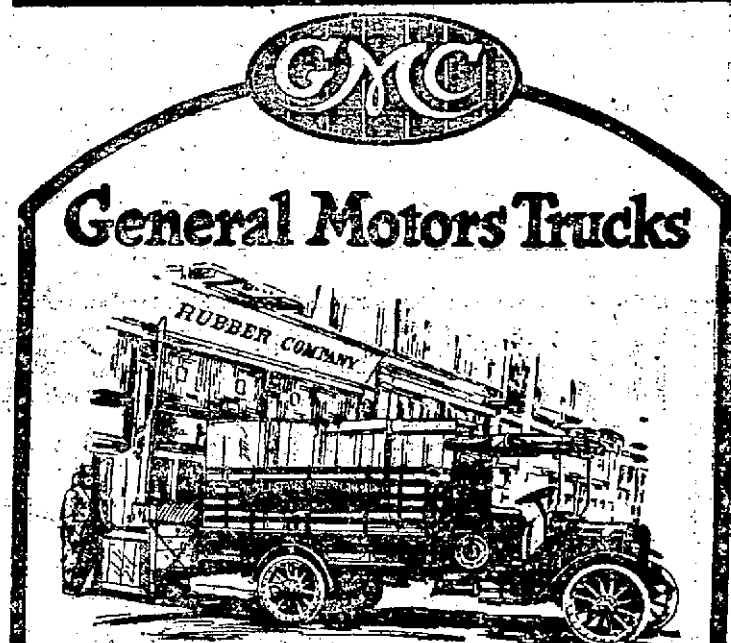

At the same time it is much lower in price than other cars which possess those features.

It will, therefore, satisfy the purchaser who has paid more for a car in the past—while to him who has paid less it will prove an unexpected revelation.

It is a trim, well finished automobile, of correct proportions, with riding and driving qualities quite distinctive among cars of its class.

NEW HOMES FOR OLD

A PORCH, new doors and windows, a better roof, shutters—and the old home is almost new again. If you think it can't be done, then call and see our plans.

A glazed door providing a daylight vestibule replaces the old front stoop. Wings at the sides made possible both a living porch and a sleeping porch. A broad roof and shutters add a touch of hominess. In this simple way, a home of beauty and usefulness was made out of an old house.

If you are unable to build a new home just now, why not remodel the old house? A little fixing here and there will make it more comfortable and livable. If it is shabby, remodeling will improve its appearance and value.

You will be surprised and pleased when you find how economical it is to remodel an old house. Come in and we'll talk it over together.
